"We take intellectual property rights very seriously..."

- This is a legal disclaimer commonly used by platforms (like Scribd, Facebook, YouTube, etc.) to protect themselves from copyright infringement.
- They follow the DMCA (Digital Millennium Copyright Act), which means:
  - If you upload content that isn't yours (i.e., you didn't make it or don't have permission), it can be taken down.
  - If you do this repeatedly, your account can be suspended or banned.

So what should you do?

1. Only upload content you own or have the legal right to use.
   - For example: Your own photos, videos, filters (AR effects), or licensed content.
2. Do not upload:
   - Content copied from others without permission.
   - Music, videos, or images that are copyrighted.

    - Files downloaded from other platforms without clear rights.

3. Facebook AR Content:
    - If you're talking about AR filters or effects (like those made with Spark AR Studio), make sure:
        - You created the 3D assets, animations, and audio yourself, or
        - You are using assets that are royalty-free or licensed for commercial or personal use.

Regarding the quote:

> "We take intellectual property rights very seriously…"
> This means:

- Don't upload copyrighted stuff.
- If you're unsure whether content is copyrighted, don't upload it.
- If reported, the platform will take down the content fast.
- Repeat offenses = account ban ("three-strikes" policy).

If you tell me more specifically what you're trying to do (e.g., are you uploading AR content to Facebook, or trying to share a Scribd file?), I can guide you better.
